21	Course Description	People drive organizational performance and performance relies on measures. HR professionals need to be skilled at planning and interpreting organizations' "people metrics." This requires a solid grasp of HR analytics: the systematic collection, analysis, and interpretation of data designed to improve decisions about talent and the organization as a whole. The use of analytics is changing the way HR professionals quantify the value that people (talent) - a company's biggest asset - have on the organization's ability to succeed in the market or in its mission. To enable executive and line managers to make smart decisions about talent,
